COX READS HIS FIRST MESSAGE TO MEMBERS OF NEW ASSEMBLY

Requests That Private Liability Insurance Companies Be Driven Out.

WOULD INVESTIGATE CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

Recommends Changes In Election Laws—Tax Remedies Are Suggested.

Governor Cox followed his inauguration by establishing a precedent on his second day in office Instead of sending copies of his initial message to the legislature for perusal by the respective clerks, Governor Cox appeared in person before the joint session of the two chambers and read his message, covering 40 pages of a printed pamphlet.

As was anticipated, the new executive placed the need of correcting and strengthening the present workmen's compensation law first and foremost in his message and devoted particularly exhaustive attention to legislation he desires along those lines He called attention to the activity on the part of private liability insurance con-

TRIBUNE CO. REORGANIZES

The eighth annual meeting of the stockholders of The Tribune company was held yesterday at the Presbyterian church. In keeping with a custom established the first year, the business session was preceded by a dinner served by the women of the church

One hundred stockholders were in attendance together with a number of invited guests The usual financial and business reports were rendered by the officers of the retiring board of directors. An interesting discussion involving the nation-wide shortage of news print paper was engaged in and its effects for the past eight months on the publishing interests in general.

Before adjournment a number of short addresses were delivered, among the speakers being the Rev E. O. Buxton, the Rev. D C. Boyd, George M. Gray and F. N. Barnes. A vote of thanks was extended to the women of the church for their splendid dinner and service

The old board of directors consisting of M D Custer, N S Endsley, Hugh M. Hay, Edgar Marshall, Irvin Porteus, George Richie, M A McConnell, John A. Hesket, Ed M Wimmer, H. S. Scott and Fred S. Wallace, was re-elected. The directors re-organized by the election of M. A McConnell, president, John A. Hesket, vice president, and Fred S. Wallace, secretary-Treasurer

GARY WARNS BUSINESS TO BE WATCHFUL

Says Our Large Capital Resources Should Be Kept Intact.

PRESENT CONDITIONS ARE MOST ABNORMAL

Says Country Is Past The Day Of Oppressive Tariff Schedules.

NEW YORK, JAN 9—"Business conditions and prospects in the United States are topics which especially call for consideration and discussion at the beginning of each calendar year," says Elbert H Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, in a statement issued today. Mr. Gary says:

"It is only a repetition to say that during 1916 conditions have been, and still are, more favorable than ever before It is apparent that, as a nation, we are, to a certain extent, up in the air; that we have no sure foundation for an uninterrupted continuance of the present volume and profit in some and perhaps many business lines; that, in many respects, conditions are influenced by circumstances which are un

Capitol Is Voted Dry By Senate

WASHINGTON, JAN 9—The Sheppard bill to abolish saloons in the national capital after November 1, 1917, was passed late today by the senate and now goes to the house, where its friends claim it is assured of passage The vote in the senate was 55 to 32 While the measure prohibits the sale of liquor in the District of Columbia, it permits importation for personal use.

An amendment which would have submitted the proposal to a referendum of citizens of the district, was defeated just before passage by a tie vote, 43 to 43.

Senators Harding and Pomerene of Ohio, are both recorded as voting against the bill.

Elks Rehearse Wednesday Eve

The second rehearsal for the Elks' minstrel, which is to be held at The Sixth Street Theatre Monday and Tuesday evenings, February 12 and 13, will be held Wednesday evening at the Elks, club rooms at half past seven. The rehearsals are being directed by Oscar Stanton of Zanesville, and Harry Hale, of Newark, and are progressing sastisfactorily The entertainment, itself, promises much in the way of novelty The inevitable "first part," of course, will be composed of choruses by a large number of the lodge vocalists, "black face" songs, popular melodies and ballads The features of the olio will not be announced before the night of the show.

Roscoe Marksmen Beat Coshocton Aggregation

The Roscoe marksmen proved their prowess last night by defeating a number of Coshocton riflemen by a margin of 37 points in a match at the Roscoe town hall last night Five rounds were fired over a 12-yd. range.

The match was witnessed by a large number of Coshocton and Roscoe rooters. The losers will be hosts at an oyster supper to be given later in the week, the date to be announced later.

Captain Miskimen of the Roscoe team stated last night that unless the Coshocton team desired a return date, the Roscoe team would not hold other matches.

Results last night were as follows: Roscoe, 611—Capt. Slaughter, 30; Glenn Miskimens 30 Cap Miskimens, 27; L C Miuse, 35, F R Foster, 39, Harold Randles, 37, George Randles, 30; Roy Finnell, 44; William Finnell, 38; Ralph Miskimens, 36, C. R. UNTRIED SCHEMES TO RAISE REVENUES

Those Who Think It Can't Be Done Have Several Guesses Coming.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 9—When the ways and means committee of the house gets busy on the revenue bill for the coming year it will have before it the figures of treasury experts showing how $700,000,000 of extra revenue may be obtained through a few changes in the present laws

Undoubtedly the most interesting suggestion made by these experts has been the imposition of an excess profits tax, which, it is estimated, would bring in $200,000,000 annually

This tax would be imposed on all profits of any corporation, partnership, stock company, etc, which are in excess of 8 per cent. The tax would amount to 5 per cent of these extra profits. So far as known, such a tax

LAWSON PROMISES TO GIVE NAME TO "LEAK" PROBERS

WASHINGTON, JAN 9 -Thomas W. Lawson who thus far has refused to mention any names in the "leak" investigation today promised to give names of as a result of the preliminary investigation being held by the rules committee, the house should order a congressional investigation This promise came after a session devoted to wrangling in which motions to hold Lawson in contempt twice were renewed by Representatives Bennet and Chiperfield Lawson had steadfastly refused to give names

"Mr. Lawson," finally asked Representative Cantrill, "if the committee should report this resolution and this committee and the house ordered such inquiry by a select committee and you are summoned will you then give to that committee the name of the member of congress and the cap tnet officer you mentioned?"

"I will," said Mr Lawson.

"Why not give the name to this committee then?"

Lawson then repeated his oft made statement that this is a preliminary inquiry and he preferred to tell a special committee because of the seriousness of the disclosure.

In the midst of Lawson's sharpest exchanges with Representative Chiperfield, a second deputy stood with acting Sergeant at Arms South between the two men to prevent possible fistcuffs

An important disclosure was the statement of Mr Lawson that he really cared very little about an investigation of the "leak" but his rather spectacular part in the whole controversy has been actuated by a desire to have an investigation of the New York stock exchange

Cox's Pet Bill Is Also Illegal

COLUMBUS, JAN 9—The Ohio supreme court declared unconstitutional the Parrott-Whittemore law, Willis' pet taxation law. The Warren law is now in effect. The Warren act is Governor Cox's pet measure As both laws have the same defects, a new taxation law will now have to be enacted. This will have no effect on taxes paid and no money will be returned.

Chicago Police Sergeant Charged With Conspiracy

CHICAGO, JAN 9—Police Sergeant John Naughton, confidential secretary of Chief Healey was served with three warrants today, each charging con-piracy He was released on $15,000 bonds

More than a score of persons suspected of connection with the alleged graft were questioned today in the state attorney's office State Attorney Hoyne announced he had been told that Healey, White, Costello, Skidmore and Heitler were innocent of collecting tribute from vice interests but that such collections had been made by a rival ring

The state attorney said Homer K. Galpin, chairman of the Republican county central committee, Roger G. Marcy, a Chicago member of the legislature and Meyer Cossman who unsuccessfully sought nomination for the state senate were named by some of those questioned today as the head of the rival ring. Galpin, Marcy and Cossman made vigorous denials.

PASSED HONEYMOON IN AMAZONIAN JUNGLES

New Yorker and Bride Met With Many Adventures.

Theodore Morgan, a retired steel man, returned recently to New York from his wedding trip, which lasted fifteen weeks, during which he and his bride traveled 10,000 miles by land and sea, says the New York Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan were married in New York and sailed thence for Para. After arrival at Para Mr. Morgan said they ascended the Amazon river for 3,000 miles, and also went in canoes up the Rio Negro and the Madero in Brazil, but their principal feat during the stay in South America was the trip to the Kaieteur falls, in British Guiana The falls are 250 miles inland from the coast port of Georgetown, Demerara.

"After buying all our stores to take with us on the trip, which was scheduled to last two weeks," said Mr Morgan, "we started up the Essequibo river in canoes with ten negroes to act as porters and fourteen Indians to handle the canoes On reaching the junction of the Essequibo and Potaro rivers we ascended the latter to the Kaieteur falls, which are located near its source. The river journey was interrupted by many rapids, where the canoes were left and the stores and equipment carried round over the portage to the farther side of the rapids. Fresh canoes were then hired from the Indians

"Some of these portages were ten miles long, and we had to walk through the dense tropical forest and jungle We were protected from wild animals by four native hunters, who wore very little clothing and were armed with bows and arrows and huge clubs made of ironwood. These they used for killing snakes, which are very plentiful Our hunters killed four in one day measuring ten feet each.

"As we were walking over one of the portages I saw a huge boa constrictor fully twenty feet long swimming across the river and climb a palm tree on the other side, where he made fast and watched us I got my gun to fire at the monster as its head swung to and fro from the branch of the tall palm, but I did not shoot it, as the gun would not go off

"The Kaieteur falls are 841 feet high the highest in the world, and are 400 feet wide. Victoria Nyanza falls, in Rhodesia, are only 500 feet high. It was a magnificent sight and well worth the tedious journey We slept in native rest houses at the different portages and were only once in real danger. That was one morning when an angry tiger passed close to our camp van. We could hear his roars, which started the natives singing. That drove the beast away The chief Indian guide said to me 'Tiger no like music He go away' Judging from what I heard of the native talent the animal showed good sense'

Elephant Holds Up Mail Coach.

An attack by a wild elephant on the Mullaittivu-Vilankulum mail coach in the northern province of Ceylon, is reported in advices from Colombo Appearing suddenly from the jungle the elephant killed the driver with one blow of its trunk and then smashed the coach against a telegraph pole Passengers who were thrown out of the vehicle had themselves in a nearby culvert, from which the enraged beast tried in vain to dislodge them. When the animal disappeared into the jungle the frightened travelers climbed a tree, where they remained throughout the night

Wampum Beads.

Wampum beads were made from a variety of different substances, but the one that was used in the greatest numbers was the ordinary hard clam or quahog, which is found from Cape Cod to Florida. Roger Williams, writing of the eastern Indians, states that they "store up shells in summer against winter, whereof they make their money."

Catching Fish by Suction.

The fish of the deep are getting wiser but they can't sidestep a recent apparatus built to ensnare them. It is nothing more than an application of the vacuum cleaner principle. The fish enter a funnel-shaped net under the boat and are drawn up to a contained tank on deck by powerful suction pumps.—Popular Science Monthly.

Get to the Front.

Here's an adage as old as Adam, but not as old as the sun: "The wise old birds don't gather in herds, but get there one by one." The motive of this is certain as the moral of it is true. If you would succeed you must take the lead, and leave the crowd to follow you.

Possum as Meat.

Is possum meat good? Ask anyone who has eaten it. Long before the white man came to this continent the Indian had discovered its excellence. The next to yield to its seductiveness was the negro, who in turn initiated the white epicure.

Newcomers Man Files Damage Suit

NEW PHILADELPHIA, JAN. 8—R. B Asher, Newcomerstown man, has filed suit in common pleas court against the gas company operating in that village, asking damages in the sum of $652.

The suit is an echo of an explosion which occurred a year ago when the Asher home was partially wrecked and Mrs. Asher painfully injured. Some time after the explosion Mrs. Asher sued the company for $20,000 personal damages and was awarded $5,000 by a jury in common pleas court. The case was appealed and the appellate court affirmed the trial court. Later, the amount was paid over to the plaintiff. The husband now wants $652 for alleged damage to his property, doctor bills and nurse hire.

MISS ETHEL CLAYTON

"Most cleverly handled and finest acted photo-play I've had in my theatre for six months," was the comment of one manager after witnessing the first performance of "The Hidden Scar," the new Brady-Made World Picture, featuring Ethel Clayton and Holbrook Blinn, which will be the attraction at the Pastime theatre tonight.

With an exceptionally strong theme chosen for the plot of the story, the masterful manner in which each succeeding complication has been presented and the unlooked-for big "punch" which marks the climax, are sure to be appreciated by every thotful audience.

IT MAY BE YOUR DAUGHTER

Commencing Thursday for a one day engagement, "IT MAY BE YOUR DAUGHTER," the greatest six reel socialogical photoplay produced by the Moral Uplift Society of America, will be shown at the Pastime theatre.

This picture is one of the very few produced which touches a vital subject in a most unusual way. It brings us face to face with conditions which exist and which we must unblushingly, bravely and squarely meet cerns in endeavoring to tamper with the present compensation law, declaring that "At no time in the history of Ohio . . . . has any special interest ever expended so much money and effort . . . . in an attempt to perpetuate administrative policies favorable to their designs."

No Further Inroads.

He disclaimed any intention on the part of friends of the compensation act to enter the field of government ownership "as that term is generally understood," and also denied that it was his intention to take over the fire and life insurance agencies now administrated by commercial concerns.

The governor also laid stress on the necessity of applying the rural school laws as enacted by the Eightieth assembly. "Nothing could be more reactionary than to so change this law as to impair its fundamental principle," said Governor Cox, declaring that the things complained of are not the fault of the law but of the counties and townships," that fail to give that vigilant attention to local educational matters which would render abuses by local school officials impossible."

Tax Recommendations.

The financial crises in Ohio cities was referred to and the suggestion made that if all property were properly returned for taxation, the present need would not exist. He declared that the problem of taxation and the proper assessment of property "will not be finally solved much in advance of the millennium," but advised that the Smith law be given more "elasticity," and commended the suggestion of the investigating commission, and of one of its members, Mr Tatum of Springfield, that interest and sinking fund charges be taken out of the first 10 mills in the law's limitations.

Legislative attention to the agricultural affairs of the state, with the suggestion that the secretary of the board be known as he secretary of agriculture, and be given wider latitude in his power.

Election Laws Codification.

Need of co-ordination and system in the state election laws, with a recommendation that the Massachusetts voting plan, and a change in the date of the primary election from August to September, were touched upon. He advocated the repeal of the Hulswitt law which repealed the Gregory law, separating national and state tickets.

Sound economy, constructive not false, strengthening of the budget system, continuation of prison reform work begun by his administration four years ago, changes in the liquor license law, in the Cass road law, a strict corrupt practices act and legislative investigation of expenditures during the recent campaign, recognition of the militia on duty at the border and the granting of suffrage to absent voters, were all included in the message.

Probe Election Expenses.

Governor Cox laid particular emphasis upon his request or a legislative investigation of election expenses, declaring that the safeguarding of the suffrage thot of the state makes it necessary.

"Human frailties should not be played upon by vast treasuries of money advanced by men or movements whose huge disbursements can hardly be looked upon as a patriotic inspiration," said the governor.

"It is not necessary," he continued, "to expend large amounts of money for the promotion of a worthy cause and inversely, any cause or candidacy having behind it unprecedented financial support is likely to be regarded with suspicion.

"It may, thru legislation, be necessary to restrain irresponsible organization whose existence and activities are born of a hidden design conceived by some interest, afraid to operate in the open."

He recommended the appointment of an investigating committee with the power to employ counsel, and the authority to summon persons and papers and to swear witnesses "in order that it might be known just what organizations have been entering into campaign activities, and how much money they expended and collected—also the names of the contributors." He suggested that the investigation should extend to candidates as well as to organizations.

"The facts as adduced by an investigation," said the governor, "will be a safe guide as to the necessity of strengthening the corrupt practices act, or more rigorously enforcing existing law, or both."

Other Recommendations.

Briefly summarized, other recommations in the governor's message were:

That the initiated bill backed by labor to strengthen the workmen's compensation law and eliminate private liability insurance companies from the state, be adopted, and that allowance for death claims under the law be increased.

That relief for cities be provided by removing sinking fund and interest charges from first ten mills limitation of the Smith 1 per cent. law, upon approval of the electors of the local taxing districts.

Opposed surrendering of state automobile and liquor tax to local communities as a measure of relief for debt burdened cities.

Urged that school code be not changed, declaring that most of the things complained of in it are not the fault of the law, but of local school authorities.

Recommended that the title of the secretary of state board of agriculture be changed to that of secretary of agriculture, retaining the agricultural board in an advisory capacity.

Suggested creation of an agricultural council composed of the governor, secretary of agriculture, dean of the college of agriculture at Ohio State University and director of the state experimental station in order to coordinate the various branches.

Favored a uniform system of accounting for the state board of agriculture.

Bureau Of Markets.

Concurred in suggestion of state grange that a bureau of market be established for the promotion of mutual exchange between producers and consumers.

Suggested a survey of the state election machinery with a view to checking expenditures of election boards; the adoption of an absent voters' law; amendment to the primary law to provide for the rotation of names on the ballot, and repeal of the Hulswitt act passed by the last legislature and providing for the printing of state and national tickets on the same ballot.

Suggested reducing the number of registration days and making primary day also registration day, and shortening campaigns by holding the primaries in September instead of August.

Declared there was no economy in making inadequate provision for the wards of the state; urged that the juvenile research bureau be given fullest opportunity to test its utility and that adequate appropriations should be made to begin the work of construction on the prison farm at London, Ohio.

Amend Cass Law.

Recommended amendment to the liquor license law changing time of issuing licenses from November to May or June.

Urged that careful attention be given to the Cass road law passed by the last legislature, declaring that "while it possesses some virtue, it is still full of frailties."

Recommended ample appropriations for state institutions of learning, for the regulation of the state banking department, inspection of building and loan associations and for the inspection department of the industrial commission.

Commended the remedial legislation suggested by State Auditor Donahey and praised by auditor for his efficient administration.

Commended the commission headed by former Governor Wills for recommending the establishment of a home for crippled children in its report, and urged establishment of such an institution.

End Indigestion Or Stomach Pain In Five Minutes

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

Even Cross, Sick Children Love Syrup Of Figs

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated: this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

CHINESE POCAHONTAS SAVES AN AMERICAN

Gave Him His Life and Took Heart In Exchange.

When the French line steamship Rochambeau, from Havre, came into her docks a little Chinese woman, clinging to the arm of a big American, came down the gangplank.

"Who is she?" was asked by a reporter for the New York World, and for answer a first cabin passenger list showed that she was Mrs. William Dromberger of Philadelphia, and the man with her was her husband. She clung to her husband timidly when first questioned, but suddenly regained her poise and remarked:

"Now ask anything you want. To begin with, I speak English about as well as most English speaking people do, and I know French and German. Do I speak Chinese? Why ask that?

CUT THE ROPE THAT HELD HIM.

Of course I speak Chinese. That is my native tongue. Was I not Ah Yung Quai, and was not my home in China until that fortunate meeting with Mr Dromberger?"

The meeting and marriage of the Philadelphian and Ah Yung Quai were romantic. During the Boxer insurrection in China Mr. Dromberger was engaged in the automobile business there as representative of an American concern.

Caught by the rebels, Mr. Dromberger was sentenced to die and was taken to a place where his head was to be chopped off. With twenty or more other men, all of them Chinese, the American was awaiting his call to the execution block when a Chinese girl by eluding the guards slipped to where he lay bound hand and foot, cut the ropes that held him and whispered to him to follow her.

Dromberger obeyed. The girl led him to her own home, and there he went in hiding. Then it became known how the American had escaped, and a search was made for him and Ah Yung Quai. Together they fled and reached a place of safety.

It would never do for the girl to return to her home, for there death awaited her. She was sent to America and to the Dromberger family in Philadelphia. There she was educated with the other children of the neighborhood.

Four years ago Mr. Dromberger returned to America and went to Philadelphia to marry the Chinese girl. Then they made a leisurly tour of the world.

LETTER FROM

ed order over ground just frozen enough to hold our weight nicely, when our artillery opened its famous and magnificent barrage under cover of which we moved forward steadily.

At every step however, the enemy's shells were taking toll of our men, and soon their machine guns joined in the carnage.

Poor old Fritz was easily getting the worst of it, however, for hi- men were in our midst with hands upraised beseeching mercy, almost before we knew it. They must have left their lines and advanced to meet us. They were totally unnerved and the job looked like easy work.

As it grew lighter tho, German snipers made us become more cautious and a small party of us had to stalk several of them from shell hole to shell hole until some more of our men suddenly came along their trench from beyond, when most of them capitulated. Upon investigation, we found several large dug outs from which a large number of prisoners were finally coaxed out, each with souvenirs galore and anxious to trade them for their lives.

We were well past our original objective by this time, so just beyond the recently won dug-outs we commenced a new support line for others who had gone further and taken up a new front for us.

The remainder of the day we dug as hard as we could for our numbers were slight in comparison with the length of line we held and there was constant danger of a counter attack.

A relieving Battn supposed to reach us that night found it impossible to do so and with comparatively no protection from a drizzling rain we stamped around till dawn, when all hands "stood to" awaiting an attack which possibly on account of the heavy ground could not materialize. As soon as the danger seemed past a couple of us went back a short way and from Fritz old dug outs, we foraged dry great coats, brown bread, coffee, soda water, tinned goods of all kinds and cigars and cigarettes galore. It appears that a new Battn or Regiment of Germans had just moved in a couple of hours before our attack and had not even unstrapped their coats or unpacked their rations, before we were upon them.

After a whale of a breakfast at the Kaiser's expense, we dug some more and built a good shelter in case the rain continued. It cleared up nicely, however, and the day passed quickly for we knew the relieving Battn was close at hand and ready to take over just as soon as darkness fell.

We were therefore soon on our way back to safety, those who were not as lucky as a few of us, to get some of Fritz's rations greatly fatigued for want of food and water. My only want was sleep, which I certainly obtained the next night. Since coming out of the charge we have fed like kings and in addition found lots of mail awaiting us, the boxes of the casualties being divided in his platoon.

Upon roll call being held, our strength was found to be sadly reduced and strange to say it seems that our best men have been sacrificed. Our officers, especially suffered most severely, and Sgt. Purkis my old Battalion Sgt., in the 34th, was badly wounded.

Almost forgot to say that a couple of days before the "drive" I was instructed to wear one stripe. Did not put same on till we came out, as we were too busy, and I thot perhaps it would be useless labor.

Glad to say tho I am still intact, and in addition have the satisfaction of having risen from the ranks in the field.

Retaliation

By ETHEL HOLMES

Hodkins & Co. was the name under which a large dry goods store was run. There was a great deal of what is called leakage in the store—that is, a certain proportion of all the goods brought into it was taken out, not by legitimate process.

One of the junior partners, Mr. Watkins, was given carte blanche to stop the leak.

One evening in a pile of paper that had been used for wrapping and that had been tucked under a counter to be carried out were found some valuable laces. They were of light bulk and readily concealed. The counter was attended by Helen Sayre, a girl of nineteen. The morning after the discovery she was sent for by Mr. Watkins and accused of having placed the laces where they were found with a view either to hide them to avoid detection or to take them away later.

The girl could not explain how the laces—she said laces—came to be where they were instead of in the boxes where they belonged. She was bewildered and tongue tied. Watkins turned her over to the police and prosecuted her for theft. Since no one had seen her take the goods he did not expect to convict her; he simply desired to make an example of her by disgracing her. She was acquitted, but every clerk in the store knew that her arrest was a bitter punishment and a warning to them.

The morning after her acquittal a young man called at Mr. Watkins' private office.

"What can I do for you, sir?" asked Watkins.

"You can give me $10,000."

"What for?" asked the dry goods man in amazement.

"A wedding present for Helen Sayre, whom you have publicly disgraced. You may call it a wedding present or an atonement or anything you like, but the money must be forthcoming. The real thief, being conscience stricken, has confessed by letter that she stole the goods in question and, seeing a floorwalker approaching, mixed them up with some cotton wrapping paper and threw them under Helen Sayre's counter."

"If Miss Sayre has such a letter as that she will be restored to her position and the thief will be prosecuted."

"You will not be permitted to see the letter. Helen Sayre does not intend to return to her position. She will be married to me this evening. I will be pleased to take her the wedding present I have mentioned."

"Nonsense, man! If you have come here to bluff me you may take yourself away or I will call a policeman to eject you."

"I came here to make a demand," said the young man, rising, "and I venture the prediction that in less than one year you will comply with it."

With this the speaker withdrew.

Six months passed, and Mr. Watkins had forgotten the incident when his daughter, eighteen years old, was walking through the aisles of Hodkins & Co.'s store, when she was accosted by a woman, who said she would like to speak to her in private. Miss Watkins, surprised, followed the woman to a secluded place, where the latter relieved her of her reticule, opened it and removed several boxes containing articles of jewelry. To the astonished girl she said:

"You were in Nevins' jewelry store this afternoon, were you not?"

"I was."

"You stole these articles. I happened to see you take them. I know who you are. You are the daughter of a member of this firm. He would not like the matter made public. If you will go home you are welcome to do so. Tell your father that he will receive a visit this evening from one authorized to arrange to keep this matter quiet."

The woman left the girl, taking the reticule and its contents, and Miss Watkins hurried to her father's office and, bursting into tears, told him what had occurred.

"Oh, papa," she cried, "don't condemn me! Indeed, I am innocent."

Mr. Watkins called a conveyance and took his daughter home.

That evening a man called on Mr. Watkins. He said that he was from Nevins' jewelry store. A woman had reported that she had seen Miss Watkins take certain articles of jewelry from Nevins' counter and slip them into her reticule. If the jewels were returned the matter would be hushed up.

But both the reticule and its contents had passed from Miss Watkins' possession.

"What are the jewels worth?" asked Mr. Watkins.

The man handed him a memorandum of the articles, with prices footing $10,000.

Watkins saw that either he must pay for the lost jewels or his daughter would be published and prosecuted as a thief. He would have hired detectives to ferret out what he knew to be a conspiracy, but the representative of Nevins' told him that the matter was without their control and unless the property was paid for those who had accused his daughter of the theft would publish it at once, and they had plenty of evidence to send his daughter to the penitentiary.

He paid the bill.

The jewels were eventually returned to Nevins & Co. in exchange for $10,000.

ed to the solicitorship two years ago, and John Frew, Lybarger's law partner, who was an unsuccessful candidate for the solicitorship four years ago.

Friends Boost Frew.

Frew's friends point out that the city will probably face an adjustment of electric lighting rates and possibly legislation in the matter and his supporters declare that in such event Frew would be the logical man for the place as he is an electrical engineer as well as attorney. Frew, tho a candidate, is making no active campaign.

It is said, however, that his law partner, Harry Lybarger, has presented his case to the mayor requesting the appointment. It appears that Mayor Richardson was loath to take the responsibility and intimated that council would probable decide the matter.

Lybarger Busy.

Report has it that Lybarger then interviewed several members of council but received no encouragement from them that they would take a hand in the matter and it appears from reports that the mayor will receive no suggestions from this source.

Turner Too.

Turner has also been busy beating the bushes trying to shake down the appointment which so far still hangs high, tho it has been intimated that it will drop soon and that Lybarger or Turner will be the fortunate man. Lybarger, it is said, has considerable political strength and is backed by his father, Captain E. L. Lybarger, one of the Republican wheelhorses in Coshocton county.

TAXES, THEN

has never before been seriously considered in the United States. Members of the ways and means committee have been impressed with the fact that it would almost solve the revenue question at one step and there is a good chance that it might be adopted.

Hundred Other Ways

In addition to this tax, a hundred other ways of meeting the threatened deficit in the treasury have been figured out by the treasury experts.

Among other things they propose a tax on copper, pig iron, petroleum and aluminum, which would yield $81,000,000 a year. Then, the restoration of the emergency stamp taxes would yield $2,000,000 a year and a tax on soft drinks, near beers, mineral waters, ginger ale, etc., would yield about $42,000,000 a year.

The old familiar increase in the liquor taxes would yield about $64,600,000 additional and new taxes on cigars and tobaccos would yield about $27,000,000.

The proposed tax of $1 a horsepower on internal combustion engines, which is another way of specifying automobiles, would bring in something like $30,000,000 annually.

Billboard Tax Suggested.

A tax on advertising billboards and on street car placards would bring in about $2,000,000 a year in addition to lessening the number of billboards, the experts estimate, and the committee may seriously consider this item. Taxes on motion picture films, glucose, phonographs and phonograph records are also proposed.

In addition to all these things, the experts have also figured out a few changes in the tariff that would be highly productive of revenue. For instance, if coffee, tea, cocoa, crude rubber, raw silk, raw wool, bananas and lumber were taken off the free list and varying duty assessed on each as much as $85,000,000 additional could be raised.

This would be on the basis of a duty of 3 cents a pound on coffee, 10 cents a pound on tea and cocoa, 10 per cent. on crude rubber, raw silk, raw wool, bananas and shingles.

Of course, all the items contained in the above list are only suggestions in writing its new revenue bill.

NERVOUS WOMEN.

IT'S THE SAME EVERYWHERE IN OHIO.

Cambridge, Ohio.—"I was nervous, run down and in bad shape. I had female trouble and took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to build me up and as a nervine. It helped my heart and nerves and did me good."—Mrs. DAISY E. TURNER, 825 Turner Ave., Cambridge, O.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is and has been for over forty years just the medicine that every woman needs when passing through the changing days. It is not a secret prescription, for its ingredients are printed on the wrapper; it's a temperance medicine.

Not only does it build up the entire system and make it strong and vigorous enough to withstand the organic disturbances, but it has a quieting effect upon the feminine organism that reduces the distress to a minimum. For any womanly ailment, disease or complaint, no matter of how long standing, we advise anxious women to get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, in either liquid or tablet form.

THIS BOOK EXPLAINS.

If you will send three dimes or stamps, to pay for wrapping and mailing and enclose this notice, Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., will send you a revised copy of his Common Sense Medical Adviser, in cloth binding, 1008 pages, with color plates. Just what you need in case of sickness or accident. Treats of Physiology, Anatomy, Sex problems, Marriage relations, Hygiene, Exercise, Disease and its prevention.

CLIMBED STAIRS ON HER HANDS

Too Ill to Walk Upright. Operation Advised. Saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

This woman now raises chickens and does manual labor. Read her story:

Richmond, Ind.—"For two years I was so sick and weak with troubles from my age that when going up stairs I had to go very slowly with my hands on the steps, then sit down at the top to rest. The doctor said he thought I should have an operation, and my friends thought I would not live to move into our new house. My daughter asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had taken it with good results. I did so, my weakness disappeared, I gained in strength, moved into our new home, did all kinds of garden work, shoveled dirt, did building and cement work, and raised hundreds of chickens and ducks. I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and if these facts are useful you may publish them for the benefit of other women."—Mrs. M. O. JOHNSTON, Route D, Box 190, Richmond, Ind.

A MODERN PYGMALION

By BARBARA PHIPPS

Trimmingham got into the work of writing for the screen by becoming infatuated with moving pictures of Miss Jeannette Meadowcroft, the heroine of various plays. He followed her—or, rather, her photographs—about, attending every production all the while sinking deeper and deeper into a love enthrallment.

Pygmalion fell in love with a statue which he himself created and which the goddess Venus endowed with life Trimmingham fell in love with pictures of a living being.

Jeannette Meadowcroft's specialty was witchery. She could personate a child of nature to perfection. Endowed with the gift of poetry of motion, her smile marvelously winning, her face a mirror of her emotions, she seemed elfish rather than heroic.

Trimmingham had written fiction, but had never created a character that had been to him a real being. It occurred to him that if he were to write a picture play for Jeannette Meadowcroft he would be inspired. He fancied that he possessed just the faculties calculated to depict her personality and her gifts. He determined to undertake the work.

He had no acquaintance with the real Jeannette. He had never seen her. Before sitting down to construct his play he considered whether he had better come in contact with her or leave his impressions as they were—drawn from her pictures. After much thought he decided to defer meeting her until after his play had been finished.

He chose a plan with very little plot to it, fearing that a plot would circumscribe him in inventing situations that would best illustrate her peculiar capabilities. He decided to have her personate a girl in that sphere of life from which he chose her associates.

She was a born coquette, but perfectly innocent. A number of young men were in love with her, but she loved none of them. Nevertheless through pity she tried to love one man and consented to become engaged to him. The effort lasted a week, at the end of which she found she could get up no feeling for him that should be called love, and since such a union was repulsive to her she broke the engagement. Since it was so brief and without love on her part and she preferred to be able to tell the man she eventually married that she had never loved before she asked her discarded lover to keep their trial engagement a secret. To this he consented.

Then comes a man Jeannette really loves. Trimmingham tries hard to form in his mind's eye a picture of another man than himself, but finds it impossible. Once engaged to Jeannette, his leading man, Throckmorton, tells her that he has never loved any other woman. To this she replies in a half hearted way that she has never loved any other man than Throckmorton. Throckmorton later hears of her former engagement. He accuses her of having deceived him. Such innocence as hers is highly sensitive, and she is crushed at the accusation. She tries to explain, but he will not listen.

Going away from her, he leaves her a prey to a conscience that burns hot within her, while her lover pays marked attention to a very wicked woman in order to cause it to burn hotter, though she bears this brutal treatment in silence. Mistaking this silence for indifference, he acts more brutally than ever. The girl becomes a trained nurse. Her lover is injured while hunting and is taken to a hospital, where she nurses him so tenderly that he relents, listens to her explanation as to her previous affair, and all ends happily.

Trimmingham succeeded in getting his play accepted by a film company, with Jeannette Meadowcroft in the title role. She played her part to perfection, with the result that he was more in love with her than ever. The women of the audience wept at the pathetic parts, and Trimmingham wanted to punch the head of the male character he had himself created. At the makeup between the lovers he felt duly repentant and supremely happy Trimmingham now asked for an introduction to the heroine of his play. He was told that no introduction was necessary; that she was usually disengaged in the evening and all he had to do was to call upon her in her apartments.

He found her in these apartments—a poorly furnished flat—but failed to recognize her. On the stage she sometimes made up as a child and never for older than eighteen. She now appeared a woman of thirty, was poorly dressed, and her old mother, with whom she lived, evidently belonged to the lower class Miss Meadowcroft, whose real name was something quite different, greeted him thus.

"I'm glad to see a man who has written a play for me. Sit down and make yourself at home Let me take your hat. Have a cigarette?"

She handed him a box of cigarettes He declined, but she took one, lighted it and puffed lustily. Trimmingham who was greatly shocked, tried to get her to talk about the artistic features of the play, but she preferred to chat upon the salary she expected to get in consequence of having made a hit in it. "The film men can't get on without us players," she said, "and have got to come down with the dust. I won't sign next time for less than $500 a week."

Trimmingham went away cured of his illusion.

CLOTHING SET AFIRE BY SUN.

New York Woman Meets With an Unusual Accident.

REFLECTOR THREW THE RAYS

Victim Held the Polished Brass Surface Under Arm, and the Heat Was Concentrated on Her Skirt—Made a Pillar of Fire of Her.

THE sun's rays focused on and reflected from a large reflector which she carried set fire to Mrs. Minnie Bulwinkle's clothes.

There is no other possible explanation of the extraordinary accident, which threatened to prove fatal. Mrs. Bulwinkle was burned from head to foot, says the New York American.

Mrs. Bulwinkle, a widow, thirty-eight years old, is janitress of the Alexander chapel, an adjunct of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, at 7 King street, New York. About 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon she stood on the chapel's front steps waiting for her son to return from school.

Had Reflector Under Arm.

Under her left arm she held a big brass reflector, highly polished, such as is placed behind a wall lamp to reinforce its light. The reflector is concave, shaped like a very shallow saucer. At that hour the sun was shining bright and hot, and as it beat down on Mrs Bulwinkle she felt a sharp pain in her left leg. Looking down, she saw that her skirt was burning.

There was only a small, round, charred hole in her skirt then, and on the edge of the hole a tiny flame was burning. The hem of her skirt was not on fire; it would have been had she stepped on a match.

Plainly the sun's rays had been concentrated, focused, united in one single mordant beam by the brass reflector, just as a fire is started with a sunglass.

Woman Lost Her Head

Mrs. Bulwinkle lost her head completely. Screaming in terror, she ran down the steps. Her flight fanned the tiny flame. Quickly all her clothes ignited. Her agonized shrieks filled the air. Almost literally a pillar of fire, she tried blindly to run into a store, then into another. The doors were banged against her. Women in the shops, scared half out of their lives, were almost fainting.

SCREAMING, SHE RAN DOWN THE STEPS.

Frank Mimando, a janitor, ran first to Mrs. Bulwinkle's aid and, with his hands scorched and blistered, tore her overskirt from her. Quickly Mimando was joined by Patrolman Hay of the Macdougal street police station. Hay, too, thought nothing of himself, but of aiding the woman.

Woman Puts Out Blaze.

It remained for a gray haired woman to show the two brave men what should be done. Hearing Mrs. Bulwinkle's cries, Mrs. Rosa Rizo, who is sixty, probably, looked from her window at 4 King street. In an instant Mrs. Rizo plucked a blanket from a bed and, running with remarkable agility to Mrs. Bulwinkle, enveloped her in the blanket's thick folds and smothered the fire. The quick witted Mrs. Rizo also urged that the suffering woman be laved with olive oil, a fine pain relieving remedy in first aid to those burned, and it was done.

Dr. Reid dressed the hands of Hay and Mimando and took Mrs. Bulwinkle to the hospital.

Five Days Afire at Sea.

With fire raging in two holds, the British steamer Iran, cotton laden, from Galveston to Bremen, put into Newport News, Va., in distress. The fire, which was discovered two days out from Galveston, had been burning fiercely for five days, and when the ship arrived the crew was nearly exhausted. The fire was extinguished in port at Newport News.

VASTNESS OF GREENLAND.

This Ice Crowned Island Is as Big as Mexico or Alaska.

Greenland is the largest island in the world. Its total length from Cape Farewell, its southern extremity in 60 degrees north latitude, to Cape Morris K. Jesup, its northern extremity in 83½ degrees north latitude, is in round numbers 1,500 miles, almost exactly the same as the length of the United States on the ninety-seventh meridian, from the mouth of the Rio Grande to where our northern boundary crosses the Red River of the North. The greatest width of Greenland is about the same as the distance from New York to St. Louis.

In regard to its area the figures of various authorities vary widely. It may be sufficient to say that it can be grouped in size with the United States east of the Mississippi, Alaska, Mexico, Colombia, Persia, Portuguese West Africa and Turkey in Asia.

Its interior is covered with a great sheet of ice rising to elevations of probably 10,000 feet in places and several thousand feet in thickness. The available ice free land is a strip of varying width along the coast, intersected by numerous deep fiords.

When one turns the pages of American arctic exploration Greenland is found more or less intimately associated during over sixty years with all American expeditions, except the Jeannette expedition.

Americans have lifted nearly all of its northwestern and northern coasts out of the arctic night and fog and have twice crossed its northern part. American names stud its coasts, and the name of an American marks its northern extremity, the most northern known land in the world.—Rear Admiral Peary in New York Times.

His Telephone Number.

"Confound it all!" cried a business man. "I've forgotten my new telephone number. I didn't write it down because that's an indication of weakness."

"What about forgetting the number?" said the other man. "Isn't that mental weakness too? Is it the number of your home telephone?"

"Yes."

"Then why not call up your wife and ask her what it is?"

And without the slightest hesitation the forgetful man called up the forgotten number and asked his amazed wife what it was.—Chicago News

Handed It Back.

"Why don't you put your mind on it and get a good cook?" demanded Jones impatiently of his wife.

"Well, replied Mrs. Jones sweetly, "I guess it is because I don't know how. I never seemed to have a faculty for selecting people to live with."—Exchange

Brine.

Brine boils at 225 degrees F., and at this degree fine salt is formed. At 185 degrees F. common salt results and fishery, or large grained, at 110 degrees F. The salt crystallizes on the surface of the brine in the pans, floats a little and then sinks to the bottom, leaving it free from fresh crystals.

Changeable.

"He fell in love with a girl whose face he saw on a magazine cover."

"Sounds romantic. Did he follow up the romance and marry her?"

"Didn't have time. There's another magazine out this month."—Louisville Courier Journal.

BIG PRODUCTIVE POWER

In the December Farm and Fireside there is an editorial in which the writer of it says:

"Some figures recently worked out dealing with the economies of crop production show that our grandfathers had to work a full nine-hour day to produce two bushels of corn. In many cases it required another full day to carry a two-bushel bag of that corn on horseback to a distant mill to be ground into meal from which were made corn bread, johnny-cake, hoecake or corn pone, according to the locality.

"Today the grandson, by the aid of improved horse-power or motor-driven machinery, can produce two bushels of corn in an hour and a half in so far as the labor element is concerned. Put in another way, the grandson, by means of mechanical and cultural helps, can accomplish six times as much in a given period as did his grandfather sixty years ago in the work of feeding the world.

"Calculating the results of increased efficiency on this basis, should the corn-growing grandson receive six times as much for a year's planting, management, and labor as did his grandsire? If so, does he get it? Is his land investment, farm equipment, and labor bill six times greater and do his living expenses, taxes, insurance form a correspondingly greater total-day? Unless the grandson's receipts have kept pace with the increase in farm efficiency of his generation, thus enabling him to secure and equip a farm for himself, pay expenses and have a reasonable surplus of profit, something is still out of joint in the corn belt business. Furthermore, even though the grandson may have become six times more efficient than his grandfather in the production of food supplies, unless he has advanced to where he can take his rightful place in the world's civic and social duties and enjoy an equitable share of its recreations, the grandson has still the most important of his accomplishments before him—getting these things."

ONE REASON

The vote cast for Theodore Roosevelt in 1904 in Ohio marks the high water mark in presidential votes in this state until the Wilson vote of last November came along and usurped first place. The Wilson vote in 1916 exceeded by 4,000 the phenomenal endorsement Ohio people gave the Rough Rider.

This fact has puzzled politicians not only here at home, but as the significance of the event becomes generally known it has aroused curiosity all over the country. For years Ohio was one of the banner Republican states. In his Emporia Gazette, William Allen White, one of the leaders of Republican thot in Kansas and indeed, thruout the West, comments on the 1916 vote in Ohio. Why Wilson ran so well, he says is "puzzling to the faithful." He continues: "No one knows, but one man's guess is as good as another. So here goes:

"In Ohio the Progressives were treated as penitents. The old guard was in control. They manned the ticket; they trotted Hughes around and spoke for him. They managed the central committee. In Indiana, across the Ohio line, where Hughes won, a Bull Mooser was state Republican chairman, and a Bull Mooser was chairman of the Republican convention.

"But these were minor incidents. The big outstanding and unmistakable fact about Ohio is that the Democratic party in Ohio has been a forward moving party. Under the leadership of the men who conducted the Ohio campaign for Mr. Wilson, Ohio has stepped into a progressive leadership in America abreast with California, Wisconsin and Kansas. A new constitution adopted a few years ago gives the people of Ohio cities liberty in home rule; gives state-wide initiative and referendum, gives to the state power to supervise industry, and makes the constitution easy of amendment.

"This progressive Democratic group could talk to the people and the reactionary Republican group could not talk to the people. So Hughes, who would not cut loose and talk turkey to the obvious progressive majority in a state like Ohio, lost. When a state like Ohio or California, or Wisconsin or Kansas, listens to a man he must make his pleadings definite and certain."

Completed election returns show that Chicago had something over 70,000 more registered voters than New York. The only thing left for New York is to annex Philadelphia, New Jersey or some other convenient suburb.

The Cleveland produce market letter last Saturday said that the price of eggs, "now high, will probaby continue stronger." Even at that it will have nothing on the eggs.

In the days of our fathers people said: "Save for a rainy day." That maxim should be modernized so as to read: "Save to tide yourself over this war prosperity."

A dispatch says the Italian government has just seized a shipment of 15,000,000 eggs, but they are probably too expensive to throw at the Austrians

Even the man who, the ancient poet said, wants but little here below, has to do without it these days or pay an awfully stiff price.

WILL TALK ON BOOZE

Rev. A. B Williams will preach on the subject of "Booze" at his revival service at the M. P. Church on Walnut street this evening. Rev. Williams expects to sho what temperance cranks are a back number; why no one except total abstainers should be allowed to enter the marriage relation; the eighth wonder of the world and many other things equally as interesting. Something of especial interest is in store for nursing mothers. Rev. Williams declares he specializes in brevity and no one need take a cushion or dictionary with them.

SNOW
By Walt Mason

When I was young I viewed the snow with dancing eyes and heart aglow. It meant that I could slide and coast, with all the happy schoolboy host, or I could tie snow into a sphere and soak some old gent in the ear. The falling of the sparkling snow meant joy and laughter long ago. I, being young, was not aware, of sorrow in the world, or care, and oh I wished, beneath the sun, 'twas just to have all kinds of fun. But now I'm old I view the snow, and think of suffering and woe. I sit in comfort by the fire, and punch the sawdust from my lyre, but others, by an empty grate, are shivering and cussing fate, and little kids, too thinly clad, are trudging thru the snowy grad; and poor old men feel rheumatic thru all their joints and tendons whiz. And there are widows needing spuds, and down-and-outers needing duds. There's so much grief, there's so much dearth, whenever snow enshrouds the earth! But there's a little one can do, to make the wintry day less blue. I'll send some plunder to the poor, to those who suffer and endure!

RED MAN INSTALL

At a regular meeting of the Red Men's lodge Tuesday evening the degree of adoption was conferred on three candidates. Officers for the next six months were installed as follows.

Price of Love.

Prospective jurors in breach of promise suits may be interested in this "personal" from the London Express: "Mary—Waited three hours at appointed spot until questioned by suspicious policeman. If this is the price of love, it is too heavy a one for me to pay. Farewell, Potts.".

Black Hair Means Vigor.

The most pugnacious of all animals known in nature is the black panther. The most difficult of all horses to control is a black stallion. The one snake which never can be safely handled by a snake-charmer is the black cobra. The only unrameable family in the timid species of mice is the black mouse.

Perhaps a Safer Investment.

The Yankee does not use his gift for putting truth pithily. A prosperous New England farmer, replying to a comment on the amount of money he was spending to put his son through college, said: "Yes, it does take a lot of money, but I'd rather leave my money in my boy than to him."—Youth's Companion.

Kitchen Hint.

If a small firm brush with a long handle is used in connection with a good cleansing powder, the work of cleaning pots and pans will be less disagreeable. The long handle will obviate the necessity for keeping the hands in the greasy water.

But Some Can Do It.

How does an old bachelor make love, anyway? Surely after one has been encrusted with the dust and toughness of three-score years or more he can't reel off that baby talk that is so foolish and sweet in the ruddy morning of life.

Coshocton Men Address Newark Revival Tues.

Following Coshocton's lead, the Inter-City revival services have been opened in Newark and Zanesville. Tuesday evening George M. Gray and Joseph L. Clark, representing the Brotherhood from First Presbyterian church, presided at the meeting at Newark First Presbyterian church.

Wednesday night J. W. Dinsmore will represent the local Brotherhood at Zanesville Central Presbyterian church

The meeting at First Presbyterian church was well attended, Tuesday evening, and Dr. Howard Grant Wilkinson, of Bucyrus, preached a splendid sermon. The idea being employed in conducting the meetings is working out admirably, and Rev. D. C. Boyd, pastor of the church, expresses much sastisfaction at the success of the plan.

Early in Thursday evening's service little Miss Jean Stuart Boyd, the infant daughter of Rev. and Mrs. D. C. Boyd will be christened by Dr. Wilkinson.

AT INAUGURATION FESTIVITIES

Among the Coshocton people who attended the inauguration ceremonies in Columbus Monday were Mrs. C. F. Barnes, Mrs. T. S. Humrickhouse, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Pomerene, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Foster, Mrs. L. E. Judd, Ralph Barnes, Judge and Mrs. James Glenn, Mrs. Frank Raiff, Tom O'Donnell, Tom Carton and E. E. McManus.

RETURNS TO WEST

Mr. Noah Gaskill of Loda, Illinois, returned home Tuesday after spending two weeks visiting among his relatives. Mr. Gaskill was accompanied by his brother Porteus Gaskill, of West Lafayette, who intends to spend a few weeks in Illinois, then come back to the central part of Indiana for a few days.

A Pair Of Queens Is Pleasing Show

That clever farce, "A Pair of Queens" made a deserved hit at the Sixth Street Theatre last evening. It is as clean a bit of comedy with as many ludicrous situations as has been seen here in recent years.

The cast thruout possesses considerable ability and their interpreation of this genuine bit of comedy merited a much large house than the one that greeted them.

BLACK MOLES.

They Are Always Danger Signs Calling For the Surgeon.

At an operation performed less than three months before his death Dr. John B. Murphy called the attention of his students to a black mole on the patient's face with this remark:

"A black mole is always a sinister lesion and one that is to be regarded with distrust, so that the first thing I want to do is to remove it. A black mole must be handled with wholesome respect, for one dares not traumatize it with impunity, either by accident or design. I therefore shall go wide of it into healthy tissue when removing it."

In the latest issue of the "Clinics of John B. Murphy" Dr. Broders and MacCarty are quoted as saying that black moles certainly predispose to a form of skin cancer called "melanoepithelioma" and as insisting that all pigmented areas of skin, such as warts and moles, should be removed when these are in locations which are or have been subjected to injury.

The danger lies in what is known by physicians as "metastasis," which is the shifting or transference of a diseased condition from one organ to another. A mole is a diseased condition of the skin in one spot and generally confined to that spot, but when an injury takes place nearby it often happens that malignant cells migrate from the deeper parts of the mole and take up their position in the wound, where they grow and spread and produce a form of cancer. A magnified section of a mole shows that the pigmented cells extend sometimes quite deep into the tissues below the skin. The migration of cells seems to take place by way of the lymphatics.

All cancer specialists agree that a mole or wart developing late in life is to be regarded with so much suspicion that the only safety lies in having it cut out.

"Eat Plenty of Hard Food."

"There are three things to keep in mind when considering diseases of the teeth—first, that soft food is injurious, and that plenty of hard food should be eaten; second, that infection in the gums and tooth cavities may cause disorders by the pus being swallowed and so conveyed to the stomach and intestines; thirdly, that the pus may cause more serious trouble by being absorbed through the lymphatics."

WALTZING WITH A MURDERESS

Grewsome Experience In English Prison For Insane.

STORIES OF SOME INMATES.

Mild Mannered, Gay and Laughing, but Each One Has Stain of Blood on Hands—Visitor's Dance Partner Had Record of Slaying Her Husband and Children.

"A CHARMING woman!" I said to myself as I conducted my partner in the dance back to her seat—sweet voiced, gentle faced, with the charm of well bred manners. "What is such a woman doing here?" I wondered, as I took my seat by her side.

Then, all uninvited, she told me, in low, musical tones, and with all the winning candor of a child, the story of a crime which a few years earlier had sent a thrill of horror through me and which had taken husband, children and liberty from her. Then I knew.

I was privileged to be a guest at the female patients' ball at Broadmoor—that prison house of the insane which stands so massive and lonely in its setting of far stretching moorland—and I had just had one of the most enjoyable waltzes of my life—with a murderess! Past me, as I sat listening to my sweet faced companion, were whirling scores of other women, beautifully gowned, bright eyed, happy; most of them, like my partner, had stood in the shadow of the gallows for the taking of human life.

With Insane Murderesses.

One by one some of the most famous were later pointed out to me by my friend, the doctor. That white haired lady, with the air of a duchess, in a Paris gown, scattering jewel flashes with every movement, had offered poisoned sweets to the children she met in the streets, with the insane delusion that the man she loved, and whose wife she had similarly tried to poison, would acquit her of any guilty knowledge of the deadly nature of the sweets. That other woman, with the girlish grace of figure and the smiling, pretty face, had drowned her baby boy in his bath in a mood of madness.

Murderesses or would be murderesses, all the gay, laughing, chattering crowd of women whose feet tripped so light heartedly, and all mad, according to the finding of the jury, when the criminal impulse seized them. And yet—so strange was it all—in no west end ballroom would you find women more charming or more sane in manner and appearance.

And so it is wherever you wander through this vast prison house which harbors the irresponsible criminal "during his majesty's pleasure," and which so strangely combines the comforts of a good hotel with the condition of durance.

Men With Bloody Hands.

In this room, as cozy as many a west end clubroom, are groups of well dressed, gentlemanly men, playing cards, draughts and chess with all the amiability and courtesy of the best ordered society, or reading or gossiping over the papers in the luxury of well padded armchairs, while soft footed waiters move among them with cups of coffee. In an adjacent room you hear the click of billiard balls and the sound of cultured voices. And each of these happy, well groomed "clubmen" has been within a few steps of the gallows or the convict's broad arrow.

SHE TOLD ME HER STORY.

The white haired, benevolent looking man who is discussing politics through the smoke curling from a shilling cigar murdered the girl who loved and trusted him during a stroll in country lanes. His companion, with the silvery hair and mild blue eyes, shot an acrobat through the heart at the stage door of a London music hall. Of the quartet who are so amiably playing a game of bridge together three have taken the lives of men; the fourth, by a miracle, escaped the "brand of Cain."—Answers.

MOST EFFECTIVE SHOT OF BIG WAR

Fired by Cushing In Attack on the Albemarle.

MADE HIM A NAVAL HERO.

Young Lieutenant Took a Most Desperate Chance and Nearly Lost His Life When He Launched Torpedo Which Blew Up Confederate Ship.

TO the United States Naval academy at Annapolis was presented recently a portrait of Lieutenant William B. Cushing, the man who sank the Confederate ram Albemarle and whom Farragut termed "the naval hero of the civil war." In the addresses on that occasion the story was recounted of the unexampled exploit of the twenty-one-year-old naval officer who fired a shot which did more damage than any other single shot fired during the war on either side.

The Albemarle was built on the lines of the old Merrimac and, like the latter, had met the fire of the biggest Federal guns without injury. In April, 1864, she attacked and recaptured the town of Plymouth, situated near the mouth of Albemarle sound. She had beaten off the Federal fleet at that place, sunk its principal ship, the Southfield, and killed the commander, Flusser.

In May the Albemarle steamed out into the sound and simultaneously engaged seven of the vessels, destroying the Sassacuse, which had unsuccessfully tried to overwhelm her by ramming beneath her water line. The Union ironclads were not light enough to cross the bar at the entrance to the sound, and the Federal officers were much puzzled as to how to be rid of the annoyance.

Would Destroy His Own Boat.

Cushing conceived the idea of stealing upon the Albemarle in a small boat under the cover of night and in this way approach near enough to discharge a powerful torpedo under the bow of the ironclad. This explosive was to be attached to the end of a long boom extending from the prow of the launch. The plan involved the almost certain destruction of his own boat as well as that of the Albemarle.

From New York he took the inside route, passing through the Chesapeake and Albemarle canal to the sound. On the night of Oct. 27, with thirteen officers and men, he started slowly up the river, proceeding toward Plymouth, where the ironclad was stationed. The distance from the mouth of the river to the ram was about eight miles, the width of the stream averaging about 200 yards and being lined with Confederate pickets. They succeeded in avoiding these and were not discovered until hailed by the lookouts on the ram. These immediately gave the alarm, and Cushing and his men were subjected to a heavy fire. While this was going on the light of a fire on the shore showed them the ironclad made fast to a wharf with a pen of logs around her about thirty feet from her side to prevent an approach within the distance necessary to discharge a torpedo.

Took the Only Chance.

Cushing, desperate, would not retreat. There was but one chance, and he took it. Under a terrific fire he deliberately circled around to gain increased speed and then dashed at the logs. The launch climbed over them just far enough, the spar of the torpedo was lowered and the lanyard pulled as a shot from the ram crashed through the little boat.

With one exception, Lieutenant Cushing was the only one of his crew to escape. Some were drowned; the rest were captured. He spent the night in the water, and about daybreak, weak and exhausted, he crawled into the cover of a swamp. After two days of wandering, during which he suffered great hardship, he succeeded in eluding his pursuers and rejoined the Union fleet.—Human Factor.

Diogenes and Alexander.

Diogenes was explaining to Alexander about his tub. "I could have got a one-room apartment with bath on the Acropolis, but how could I keep any reputation as a cynic if I lived at a place like Marathon Manor?" And leading the hero to a clever little place that had not yet been spoiled by the crowd, he welcomed him to Bohemia over the red ink of Chios.—Exchange.

Use for Leaves of Nettles.

A brilliant and permanent green can be produced from the juice of the stalk and leaves of nettles, and is used to dye woolen stuffs.

WROTE FEELINGS AS AIRSHIP FELL

Englishwoman Gives Remarkable Display of Nerve.

MACHINE JUMPED UPWARD.

Pranced Hundred Feet Into Air Before Making Sudden Descent With Woman Flier and Her Pilot—She Would Have Preferred Mile Drop to One of Only Two Hundred Feet.

MISS TREHAWKE DAVIES, whose claim to the title of leading woman air traveler is incontestable — she has crossed the English channel by air ten times among other distinctions—was the heroine recently of an unusual experience.

She was on a voyage with H. J. D. Astley (since killed by a fall from Liege to London in a monoplane. Attempting to descend at the Ronchin camp, near Lille, Mr. Astley lost control and the machine fell 200 feet and was smashed. By a miracle Mr. Astley and Miss Davies escaped without a scratch, and meanwhile the undaunted passenger had written in a very shaky hand in her diary the story of the fall—in a few words, but eloquent enough:

"Planing madly. Dive to earth * * * 2:20; * * * bits of us flying now."

After reaching earth Miss Davies described the adventure more fully. When the machine turned over she thought she was going to be pitched out, but she was wedged in with luggage and things tumbled on top of her.

Woman Kept Her Nerve.

Mr. Astley's written tribute to this woman of amazing sang froid is remarkable: "Miss Davies coolly fixing up her camera. * * * She might have just stepped out of a taxicab."

Miss Trehawke Davies in her flat in the west end of London described in charmingly vivacious style her adventure. She said to a Daily Mirror reporter:

"For some time before our plane fell it was behaving very curiously. When we were flying 2,000 feet high the machine, like a mad thing, jerked up another hundred feet. Many times have I experienced sudden dives, but never had a plane pranced upward before. But I kept writing in my diary, which I have taken with me on every trip.

"It was after the aeroplane narrowly missed plunging into some trees that all the excitement began. We were then about 200 feet high, and the machine began to wabble one way and then the other. 'Well,' I thought, 'I hope we are not going to drop from this little height. I should much prefer to fall from 5,000 feet.'

Expected to Turn Upside Down.

"Once I thought we were going to turn head over heels, and I hoped we should not, because it would cause such a mess. I was quite lackadaisical and unconcerned about the whole thing. 'What does it matter after all?' were my thoughts. So I continued writing, which is not so easy to do in a plane as some people say it is.

"When we had dropped to nearly fifty feet I was amazed to see little bits of wood breaking from the whizzing propeller. 'What does it mean? We have not touched anything,' was the query in my mind. And then * * * like a flash of lightning we heeled right over on to the left. Talk about 'banking!' That was a record.

"By this time Mr. Astley had pushed his foot through the platform and was clinging to the aeroplane to save himself from falling.

"We came to earth at last. Yes, and it was a most remarkable descent, vertical, in fact. I can picture the wrecked machine now, the left plane buried deep in the ground and the right one pointing directly to the sky.

"Our lives were probably saved through Mr. Astley not switching off the motor when he was first in difficulties."

GARY WARIES

usual. In the steel and iron industry the results have been not only extraordinary, but they have been much larger than any one has ever predicted for this period, tho many are apt to think, if they do not say, that they prophesied what was coming.

"The demand for steel for more than a year, in all departments, has been in excess of the supply; the production for 1916 was about 28 per cent. greater than for any previous year; the prices have been higher for many, and probably most, of the materials sold than those received for many years, and they have generally been influenced by the purchaser himself in consequence of his eagerness to supply his requirements; collections have been entirely satisfactory, and much to the pleasure and comfort of both employer and employe, the wage scale has been and is the highest ever paid. It follows that profits have been large.

To Keep Capital Intact.

"Our large capital resources should be kept intact, so far as consistent with the principles of safe government, wise and economic administration, proper development and progress, absolute protection to the rights of all, and the transaction of business, public and private. We should not become overextended financially. Our cash resources ought not to be so tied up as to become unavailable for our own demands. They should be kept in liquid form to a large extent, so as to permit realization of actual money or credit upon them if and when necessary. We should be prepared for emergencies, for adverse developments, even tho unexpected. However, we should not permit our riches to intertere with our progress. There is danger that great wealth will produce the opposite of necessity—extravagance, indolence, waste, indifference, restrogression, stupidity, failure. We must be on our guard against this danger.

"Our country should be placed and kept on a parity with all other countries. I refer to the tariff question. I have said before and I now repeat, this question should not be considered or treated as a poltical or partisan one. The greatest good to the greatest number should in this, as in all public questions, be the sole inquiry and determination. Facts should be ascertained and honest, sensible, practical results secured. Prohibitive tariff rates, so called, or schedules that are so high as to permit a producer to oppress the consumer on luxuries we do not produce in this country should be reasonably high so as to produce revenues for the government; and tariff rates on the things coming from foreign countries similar to those we produce, whether in the forest or in the fields, in the mines or in the manufacturies, should be sufficient high to protect our producers, including the wage earners, against cheap foreign labor and its results, and so as to put our country and its people on a fair and even basis with all other countries and peoples. Possibly this could be secured to a certain extent by anti-dumping provisions or by reciprocity conditions. At any rate, it is not reasonable or fair to our people to place them in a position of disadvantage. Nearly all foreign countries have tariff provisions in the laws which prevent our producers from selling there, and we should have like security.

"And we should also, if possible, be on an equal footing with all other countries in regard to transportation facilities on the seas. When the war closes, foreigners will with greater persistency than ever, reach out for the custom of non-producing countries. This is a desirable business if it can be transacted at a profit. The subject has been thoroly discussed, and it is I think, now generally conceded that the laws of navigation need amendments."

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundown," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Displaces Steam Roller.

To replace the familiar steam roller a gasoline machine has been developed which, in addition to economizing on fuel, gives its driver an unobstructed view of his work.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour thru a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

BASKETBALL

The Cubs and M. E. basketball teams played the final of a series of games at the Central gym Tuesday evening. The Cubs won by 27 to 20. The Cubs won two of three games.

"LOVE NEVER DIES."

"Love Never Dies" is the title of a beautiful example of photoplaying to be exhibited at the Pastime theatre today only with Ruth Stonehouse, Franklyn Farnum and Kingsley Benedict playing the leading roles. The nature of the play is indicated by its title. The love of two faithful hearts, steadfast under the most trying circumstances, forms a romance that will have general appeal—for "all the world loves a lover." An excellent organization interprets the engaging story, and beautiful photography will reflect natural scenes of great charm. It's a Bluebird.
